were hard hit by graduation. Snider (19-6) has been among the best teams in the SAC and concluded last season by winning a sectional title (the rest of the boys state tournament was postponed and then canceled all together in the week that followed the sectional win), but seven seniors, including four starters, graduated. Michael Eley, who led the Panthers who 21.2 points per game and is now a senior, left to join Elevation Prep.

"With three new assistant coaches and a bunch of new faces on varsity, it's a little bit like re-instilling the culture and re-instilling principles," coach Jeremy Rauch said. "We do have some guys who can do what we want and what we expect from an effort and attitude standpoint, especially."

Karson Jenkins, who often made big splashes when he got in the game as a sophomore last season, will now have to be a go-to guy, as will his classmate Aidan Lambert, who averaged just under eight minutes per game.

North Side, meanwhile, appears to be on an upswing. The Legends won just one game in 2019-20, but they matched that in their season opener on Wednesday when they beat Mississinewa 77-73. Freshman Brauntae Johnson scored 26 points. North Side has 10 returning varsity players, and coach Gary Andrews said he is excited to have a number of seniors with previous varsity experience, something he hasn't had since he took over ahead of the 2018-2019 season.

But to make a real dent in the standings, North Side will have to improve on defense.

"We were terrible defensively last year. We're not good yet, but we're better than we were last year, and we're hoping we can be a solid defensive team by the middle or the end of the years," Andrews said.

The number of returning players could also favor the South Side Archers, even accounting for the graduation of Treveon Jones and Kamron Mitchell, who averaged a combined 31.2 points per game last season. Senior Austin Jordan, who missed much of last season due to an ACL tear, is back on the floor, as is Ashton Johnson (10.3 points per game), Jaylen Latimore (5.8) and Xzaevyon Hollister (3.3).
